Solving Problems

In most short stories and novels, the main character confronts a problem that is identified in the beginning and solved by the end. In this activity, you will identify a problem faced by a main character in a Storyworks story, and think about how the problem will be solved.

Directions: As you read, write down the problem faced by the main character. Then use clues from the story to predict how the problem will be resolved. When you finish reading, explain how the problem was solved.
