

Article: _____

Name: _____

Date: _____

What Do You Know?

A great way to get the most out of a nonfiction article is to ask yourself a few questions before you start reading. What do you know about the subject already (or think you know)? What would you like to learn? After you've finished reading, it's great to ask yourself, "What did I learn from this?"

Directions: Before reading the article, fill in the top two boxes below. Then, read the article. After you finish, make a list of the facts you learned.

What I KNOW

What I WANT to Know

What I LEARNED

HOW I Can Learn More
